Chgo. Hgts. Theatre Offers Features

Warren William, featured player in "The Mouthpiece," the Warner Bros. picture coming to the Lincoln Dixie Theatre in Chicago Heights next Saturday, June 18 is slated for stardom as a result of his work in this adaptation of a play by Frank Collins based on actual incidents in the life of a notorious New York attorney.

William, as a "mouthpiece," the term applied to lawyers who represent doubtful clients caught in the toils of the law, is said to deliver the best work of his stage or screen career. Originally an eager, zealous young prosecuting attorney, he plumbs the depths in character and association as a result of an unfortunate case in which his prosecution brought an innocent youth to the electric chair. The progress and regress of "The Mouthpiece" forms the basis of the story, the romantic angle very evident in the affairs carried on by William.

Dealers Clamor For Frankfort Feeds

The Frankfort Grain Co., has had such a great rush of orders for their Wilco Feeds that they have been obliged to install new machinery and enlarge their feed manufacturing plant. Mr. Henry Luhring, manager of the plant said it has developed into a greater reality than its founders had dreamed of and that at the rate the business is expanding, the Frankfort Grain Co., will be the greatest manufacturer of chicken feeds in this section of Illinois. Twenty-five dealers are clamoring to handle this popular and fast selling line of chicken feeds.

Railroads Object to 33 Cent Tax Levy

Taxpayers in Will County may obtain a reduction in their tax bills provided the attorneys for railroads succeed in cutting the road and bridge levy in townships where the rate is in excess of 25 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation.

In Joliet township and many other townships of Will County the road and bridge levy is 33 cents. The highway commissioner can levy up to 25 cents for road and bridge purposes, and another eight cents has been obtained by a vote of the town board.

The justices of the peace, supervisor and town clerk constitute the town board. This organization invariably approves an additional levy of eight cents in order that the township highway commissioner can obtain the full amount taxable under the law.

Attorneys, representing railroads in Will County, and throughout the state have brought suit to prevent the township boards from voting a tax rate. Their action is based on the fact that the justices of the peace have no executive powers to establish tax rates, and that the 8 cents additional applied on the tax bill is unconstitutional.

Supervisors from the various townships of the county were informed of the action being taken by the railroad companies at a meeting in the courthouse after the county board session, Monday by Albion F. Delander, county clerk.

"The legality of the town board's right to add eight cents to the road and bridge tax levy is being questioned by attorneys for the railroad companies," Mr. Delander said.

"I want to explain the situation to the town officials so that they can use their own judgment in making out the levies which will be filed in September."

Mr. Delander pointed out that if the various townships levied 33 cents the county clerk's office would be obliged to spread the tax pending the decision of the supreme court. He said if the supreme court held the tax unconstitutional then the railroad companies and other individuals would be entitled to a refund provided they filed objection to the levy.

After the court decision is announced, and if the additional eight cent tax is held unconstitutional, then the maximum levy in future years will only be 25 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation.

Townships which have been using a tax levy of 33 cents for road and bridge purposes are: Joliet, Crete, Custer, DuPage, Jackson, New Lenox, Peotone, Reed, Will and Wilton. Washington, Channahon and Mokena townships levy 33 cents.

Highway commissioner Emil D. Cappel of Frankfort township advises that his township is not in the 33 cent rate class, as Commissioner Cappel and the town board of Frankfort township cut the 33 cent rate down to 25 cents at the meeting of the town board last fall, so they are one jump ahead of the other townships.

3-Cent Postage In Effect July 6th

Postmasters throughout this section have received notices from the Postal Department that the new postal rates as provided for in the new revenue bill recently passed by congress, will go into effect next month. All first class postage will be raised from two cents to three cents beginning July 6th. Stamped envelopes of the regular two cent stamp variety will cost $32.24 per thousand after July 6th. Second-class mail matter will also be raised and the raise goes into effect July 1st. Airmail rates will be raised from 5 cents to 8 cents. Parcel rates will also be advanced, the raise will go into effect in October.

Set Condemnation Suit For Wolf Rd. Right of Way for July 11

The battle which has been waged for several years to secure a right of way thru the C. M. Cleveland farm south of Mokena for the extension of the paving of Wolf road from the Hickory Creek bridge to the Lincoln Highway, is nearing the finish with the institution of condemnation proceedings by Will County against C. M. Cleveland, Anna W. Cleveland and Emil Johnson.

County Judge Ralph Austin set the hearing on the condemnation petition for July 11th at 10 a. m. and has ordered the issuance of summons to each of the defendants in the case.

Seven Frankfort property owners have been asked to serve as appraisers and set a price on the property to be condemned.

Soon as the condemnation proceedings have been disposed, the county will advertise for bids and a contract let for the construction of the Wolf road paving from the Hickory Creek bridge south to a connection with the Lincoln Highway.

To Make Change In Zoning Ordinance

A meeting to consider a change in the Orland Park zoning ordinance in order to zone a portion of Keane avenue for business was held in the Orland Park school auditorium last Wednesday evening. There was no opposition registered to this change and it will be put into effect. The new change will place the Daniel's Service station in the business zone.

Man Convicted of Frankfort Murder Seeks Appeal

Hearing of arguments on a motion for a new trial made by Frank Schanda, convicted Chicago slayer now facing a 99-year term in the penitentiary, was continued Monday by Judge Frederick A. Hill in circuit court. He set hearing for 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon and indicated he would grant no further delay.

The court was scheduled to dispose of the motion Monday, but Joseph Lustfield, Chicago attorney representing the convicted man, was unable to be in Joliet because of a legal engagement in Cook County.

Not until the motion is granted or overruled will the court announce sentence on Schanda and authorize his transfer from the county jail to prison. The jury which found the slayer guilty of killing William Schmook, aged Frankfort oil station attendant, in a holdup the night of January 10, fixed punishment at 99 years.

Schanda's declared intention is to carry his fight for freedom to the state supreme court if necessary. He insists he did not receive a fair trial and expresses confidence the case would be remanded for retrial by a higher court.

Sheriff Oliver Flint said Monday he is anxious to have the murderer taken to prison, as that will relieve county authorities of responsibility for his custody. Fear that friends of the prisoner might attempt to effect his release has prompted extra precautions at the county jail and lights are kept burning from dark to dawn on all sides of the building.

Benefit Dinner for Orland Community Center Foundation

A benefit dinner will be given for the new Community Center Foundation at the Orland Park M. E. church Thursday evening, June 23rd. Many have felt that it would be very fitting to give this opportunity to let others show their appreciation of this fine gift of Mr. Warner by helping in this way to provide funds to develop the camp.

The dinner will be served by the Plunkett Dinner Company and the entire proceeds will go to the development of the camp. The boys and girls of the community have worked hard to provide the camp building, but there is a little debt on the building due to repairs. It is hoped that this can be paid off thru the proceeds from this dinner.

Many have already availed themselves of the privilege of using the camp grounds. It is free to all to use and all are invited to do so if the place is not misused to avoid this it is necessary to get permission from the directors.

The Plunkett dinners are unique in that you are entertained as well as given all you can eat. The dinner will be served at 6:30 and 7:30 p. m. in order to make it possible for the country people to get in. It is necessary that reservations be made ahead of time for this dinner. Tickets will be on sale by the young people. If the ticket salesmen do not reach you, you may make your reservation thru Rev. Sanders.

It is hoped that all will avail themselves of this opportunity to get a good dinner, be entertained and also help in this way to develop the community center foundation.

Magician Coming to Rialto Theatre

For the first time since he became the most famous mystifier and entertainer of his age, Thurston the magician will give his performance in a moving picture theater. He opens this engagement at the Rialto at Joliet on Thursday, June 23rd for a three day engagement.

The art which Thurston practices and with which he has amused as well as baffled fifty million people in all parts of the world, is the oldest of all arts. It is as old as man. From the mystery of Aaron's Rod to the miracle of the radio—that is the history of magic in a nutshell.

For twenty-five years now Thurston has been the foremost exemplar of this fascinating art. For twenty-five years he has played the legitimate theatres in this country, and it has only been after a number of years of persuasive arguments on the part of the R. K. O. interests that he agreed to a year's tour under their coast to coast banner.

Mr. Thurston's performance will consist of a collection of his most famous illusions. He will be supported by his entire company of thirty artists.

The management of the Rialto announces that this will be Mr. Thurston's only appearance in Joliet this season. The screen attraction for these three days will be Joe E. Brown in "The Tenderfoot".

Triangle Talkies

Here we are again folks! And I wonder how one of our fair sex is enjoying her spins in Larry's new car. How about it Ollie?

Benny, how does it feel not being tied to a ball and chain any longer? Well I guess all the fair maidens in Tinley are not so sorry that you are back in circulation again. How about it girls? I guess Bernie likes tall red heads cuz I have heard several rumors about Les who happens to be one of those particular kind of (He man).

A couple of our members seem to be becoming disinterested in either our club or the members, I don't know which. But I guess that is the result when young folks begin to go steady with boy-friends and girlfriends? from out of town. But in spite of both this and the depression we're still going strong.

Did you all notice the new Auburn (8) that is floating through town? Wonder whether he intends to use the golf trophy for a decoration on his radiator cap. Hot darn wouldn't that be keen.

The regular monthly social is next Monday evening June 20th. And I think our honorable committee has a surprise in store for us, cuz they won't even let any of the members in on it (it's a secret folks so dont miss it!).

Start Them Early

Nothing will help instill thrift into your youngsters more than to start them out with bank accounts of their own.

You will have to make the deposits at first—but get them interested!

Then as soon as they are old enough to earn a little money of their own, encourage them to put a part of it in their savings accounts.

When they grow up they will appreciate the value of money and realize the helpful influence of a bank book.

SUCH IS LIFE—Two Popular Numbers

NEXT GREAT DELUGE IS FORECAST BY SCIENCE

Washington.—We still speak of "the Ice age" as if it belonged to the remote geological past. Geologists have reached the conclusion that there were several ice ages. What is more, the last Ice Age, known as the quaternary, is only about half over, despite our blistering summers. "Eternal ice" or "eternal snow" are figments of the poetic imagination. Very slowly the great ice sheets in the Arctic and Antarctic regions are melting and pouring their torrents into the oceans. The earth must inevitably change its aspect and its climate.

How the change is slowly taking place and what the result will be has been considered by such able geologists, physicists and meteorologists as Prof. Sir Edgeworth David of the University of Sydney, Australia, Prof. Wilhelm Meinardus of Göttingen and a score of others. The latest is Dr. William J. Humphreys of the United States weather bureau, who recently addressed the American Meteorological society on the subject, summarizing old views and modifying them in the light of the information gathered in the Antarctic regions by the Byrd expedition and in Greenland by the ill-fated Prof. Alfred Wegener and his companions.

The glacial sheets that now cover the North and South poles were once 12,000,000 square miles in extent—more than one-fifth the present total land area of the globe. In the course of about 700,000 years they have melted down to their present area of about 600,000 square miles. The ice on Greenland alone is ten times vast than the area of the State of New York. Wegener's echo soundings showed that it is over 9,000 feet thick near the center of the island and about 4,000 feet thick near the edges of the bowl over which it spills. Here, then, we have enough ice to provide a layer of water one mile thick over 700,000 of Greenland's 827,275 square miles of surface. To this we must add another layer of mile-deep water which would be spread over 3,300,000 square miles of Antarctica's 5,400,000 square miles.

The earth is steadily growing warmer. As all the ice at the two poles melts a stupendous volume of water will be released. Professor David conservatively estimates that the sea level will rise 50 feet. Professor Meinardus doubles that estimate. Doctor Humphreys, with the studies of Byrd and Wegener before him, believes that the rise will be 151 feet. Such floods are nothing new, as we see by the marine fossils found on the tops of the Rockies, Andes and other mountain ranges.

So, within 30,000 or 40,000 years there will be another deluge. Salt water will sweep over the continents, leaving only the higher land dry. Holland will be inundated. Fish will swim in Buckingham palace and Westminster abbey, for most of England will lie beneath the waves. The Desert of Sahara will be a great inland sea. What is now New York will be marked by the upper stories and towers of the taller skyscrapers as they jut out of the water.

In an inundation which would thus change geography and which would be accompanied by a rise in temperature, the climate would return to what it was when dinosaurs roamed the earth and dense jungles of dank, gigantic ferns grew in what are now Pennsylvania and Canada. Palms and alligators would flourish at the poles as they did millions of years ago.

What will become of man if climatic conditions are thus changed? Ice sheets in high latitudes produce strong contrasts in temperatures between the polar and equatorial regions. Winds, storms, weather that changes from day to day are the result. Man flourishes under such conditions. If the torrid zone were to become even more torrid than it is, and if what are now frozen tracts around the North and South poles are to bear sub-tropical life, man's food supply will not be what it is now.

Prof. G. S. Simpson of the British meteorological office has advanced the theory that Chellean, Mousterian and other races of men that once flourished in southern Europe were wiped out because the climate changed and that inedible vermin took the place of the animals that were hunted. No one can tell what may happen if a new carboniferous era should follow the warming of the earth. Man is about as old as the present Ice age. It is a question if he will survive it.

POTPOURRI

Many Kinds of Beetle

More than 150,000 different species of beetle have been studied and described by scientists, making up the largest group of insects in the world. Twelve thousand of these are natives of Central and North America. The name means "biter," all the species having mouths strong enough to invoke considerable damage to their prey. READING AND CHARACTER

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

He was twelve, perhaps, sitting all humped up upon the floor in one corner of the office building reading the evening news, his bag of undelivered papers on the floor beside him.

"What are you reading?" I asked, knowing that nothing ordinary would keep him so engrossed.

"Hickman," was the only word he uttered.

"Do you find it interesting?" I inquired.

"I say so," he answered, and kept on with the reading.

I knew very well what was holding his childish attention. His young mind was concerning itself with the sordid details of the trial of "the Fox," which was at that time holding the front page of practically every newspaper in the country. It was a crime so brutal, so horrible, so revolting that I could not bring myself to the point of reading about it. My chief interest was that the unhappy perpetrator should be put away as soon as possible, and as justice should decide, and that we should be permitted to forget the horror of it all. And the boy was only twelve, whose mind was so engrossed with the lurid picture of the crime, that he could not go on with his evening task. It was to me pitiful.

What is the effect upon childish immature minds of the stories of youthful crime? It cannot be good. The impressions and the influences which come to a child between the ages of twelve and eighteen are the most lasting impressions.

The details of crime are what the people want, the news editor says, and if the paper is to succeed, that is what they must be given. I wonder, however, if it is necessary to broadcast the horrors of crime always upon the front page, to center the attention upon them by the use of heavy-faced streamers, and photographic representations of the most revolting scenes connected with these crimes. When Mrs. Snyder was electrocuted, the details of her execution were so minute as almost to take one into her presence to see her agony, and to hear her moans. Such reading is bad enough for adults whom experience has hardened, but for children!

Modern Contract Bridge

No. 4.

The Rule of Eight

DURING the play of the thirteen tricks of a hand, four tricks will be won by aces, about four or five with other honor cards, and the remainder with lower cards. Thus we get a yardstick for the trick measurement of a hand.

The Yardstick of Tricks.

Honor-Tricks 8 Low Card Tricks 5 (possibly 8½)

In suit bids these low card tricks are won by trumps, or by end cards of set up side suits. At no trumps, all tricks are won either by honors or by end cards of suits.

In measuring your total trick expectancy, in accordance with your honor-tricks you may use the following count:

The 4-5-5½ Count

(At No Trump)

Honor-tricks Will develop low card expectancy is

4 to 4½ 2 to 3 One-odd (or down 1)
5 3 Two-odd
5½ or more 3 to 4 GAME.

When you and your partner are bidding a suit, it is highly improbable that against your trump defense the opponents will be able to win any low card tricks. So you have only the definite fear of their defense in honor-tricks. Therefore a partnership holding of 5½ honor-tricks with strong trumps puts you in the game zone with a major suit bid. To carry you over the long hard road to game at a minor suit, where the opponents must be held down to two defensive tricks, some additional honor strength is usually needed.

To give a brief outline of the specific use of the yardstick in the most generally recurrent situation, let us assume that you are in the position of responding to your partner's original suit bid of one. If he has bid first or second hand, you know that he has at least 2½ honor-tricks. He may have more than 2½ honor-tricks, even, possibly, as many as 5. If so, these surplus tricks will be shown in subsequent rounds. For the present you must assume that he holds the minimum, an unbreakable rule in this system.

We will suppose that you have counted your honor-tricks immediately upon sorting your hand so as to be ready for any emergency. How you have only to add your number to the minimum of 2½ shown by partner to know whether or not your partnership total of honor-tricks (5½) puts you in the desired game zone. If you find this to be the case, you must serve prompt notice of the important fact on your partner. This notice may be served in any one of three ways which you deem advisable. First, by an immediate bid for game at your partner's declaration; second, by a bid for game at no trump; or third, by a jump forcing take-out, of one more than necessary, in another suit.

If your partner has opened with a major suit in which you have length or strength, and you have a short side suit that gives you the probability of making some separate use of your trumps, it is usually best to choose your partner's suit for the game try.

Lacking trump assistance, or another biddable suit, a three no trump bid would, naturally, be your only recourse. But when you hold with your 3 honor-tricks a long or strong suit of your own, the game probability should be announced by a forcing take-out. This forcing take-out is the most important and the most often employed of the three unconditional forcing bids of the forcing system. It will be fully outlined in a later article.

Learned to Leave Fire Alone

One of the most amusing incidents of the early days of anthracite was when a firm of wire manufacturers, early in the Nineteenth century, attempted to substitute anthracite coal for soft coal in their rolling mill. After working for two days and using two cartloads of coal they were about to give up. The attendants of the fire, who had done a lot of work with pokers, laid down these tools and went to lunch. When they returned they were astonished to note that the furnace was red hot. Opening the door they found the interior glowing with intense white heat. So, accidentally, they found that the way to make an anthracite fire burn was to leave it alone!

Remarkable Tide Ranges

The United States coast and geodetic survey says that the largest periodic range of tide on the coast of the United States proper occurs in the St. Croix river, Maine. In this locality there is an average range of 20 feet and a spring range of about 23 feet. In Turnagain arm, Cook Inlet, Alaska, there is a mean range of approximately 30 feet and a spring range of approximately 33 feet. The largest known periodic tides in the world occur in Minas basin, Bay of Fundy, Nova Scotia, where a mean range of 42 feet and a spring range of 45 feet have been reported.

Upside Down Woman Is Cured

London.—The extraordinary case of a woman who spelled backward and read books and drew pictures upside down is recorded in the current Lancet, British medical journal, by Dr. K. Eager and Dr. J. W. Fisher of the Devon Mental hospital.

After a cure by hypnosis the woman found that she was unable to read passages which she had written before her treatment.

The woman, a house servant in Devonshire, was subject to such trembling of the hands that she broke more than the usual number of cups and saucers. After an illness she was committed to the hospital for examination. She had previously been classed as a congenial mental defective.

In the hospital, failure of speech necessitated her writing her wants on a slate, but the nurses could not understand the script. Each word was written backward, though put down from left to right in the customary manner, and with the right hand. The letters were correctly oriented, though in reverse sequence.

Thus, requested to write "policeman," she put down "namedlop"; for "Devon" she spelled "Noved"; all words were similarly reversed.

In mathematics, she wrote all the figures upside down, and did the same thing in drawing elementary objects like dogs, cats and houses. In cleaning up a room she turned pictures and vases upside down.

After certain tests of vision based on the theory that the psychic shock which had temporarily deprived her of speech had upset the co-ordination of other closely related centers of the brain, the physician put the patient under light hypnosis.

The cure seems to have been complete, and the woman has spent a large part of her time lately writing normal letters to her friends, ridiculing her previous eccentricities.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

To soften hard brown sugar store in the bread box for a day.

Half an hour is ample time to allow for baking of medium-sized apples.

Leftover breakfast bacon can be used to good advantage in potato soup.

When frying fish or other foods don't forget to drain all the pieces carefully after lifting them out of the fat.

Before boiling a cracked egg rub the shell with lemon juice. The egg albumen is quickly coagulated by the acid.

When using only egg yolks in a cake, add one tablespoonful of cold water and beat well. This will make the yolk mixture fluffy and it will blend better with the other ingredients.

The House of the Three Ganders

SYNOPSIS

Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morrison. Bat comes after him, but his new friends conceal him. Fed and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan), is sent on his way to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. The colonel secures him a situation in the village of Amity Dam. He becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, considered by the straitlaced people of Amity Dam as a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety. Bat Morrison comes to Amity Dam to take his son back to his own dissolute life. Morrison, known lawbreaker, is overawed by Colonel Blake, who is the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. With Bony, he pays a visit to Bumpy Brown.

There was a rap at the door. Shad opened it. A well-dressed, handsome young lady about twenty years old stood looking at the boy with an expression of astonishment in her face. She uttered no word of greeting.

Her manner was haughty when she said: "I want to see Mr. Brown."

She turned away as she spoke. Bumpy changed color. With a look of surprise and embarrassment he said: "All right. I'll be with you in a minute."

The girl descended the steps and disappeared. Bumpy put on his coat and hurried out-of-doors saying:

"Set down, boys. I'll be with you soon."

He closed the door behind him and followed the young lady. Through a window the boys saw them walk together into the edge of the thicket where they stood talking.

"Who is that?" Shad asked.

"Darned if I know," was Bumpy's answer. "But I'd like to set an' look at her for a week."

"She is pretty—no mistake," Shad agreed.

Soon the girl went away.

Returning Bumpy stopped in front of the shack. The boys went out to him. He did not speak of his mysterious caller. He finished his work. He put some tools and clothing in his pack basket.

"Well, boys, we'll go along with ye," he said cheerfully. "Dick an' me are goin' to Bolton tonight so we can begin work in the mornin'."

Two small green sticks having four crotches were lashed on either side of the basket. They sloped upward and backward. A lashed rod lay in the lower crotches. This was Dick's saddle. The rim of the basket helped the bird to balance himself when necessary. Released from his cage, Dick laughed joyously and shouted, "Come on," and flew to his perch behind the pack basket now on the back of his master. In a moment, settled on his perch he soberly declared:

"Money makes the mare go."

The boys laughed. It was indeed an outfit as curious and as amusing as any that ever took to the road. Bumpy stopped suddenly and turned to his two companions and said:

"By Jeedix, boys! We've had fun an' we'll have some more. I like you. If any one o' you ever needs a friend or a home, come to me."

When he had returned that evening Shad succeeded in writing a letter to Ruth Blake in which he felt a sense of pride and satisfaction. It told of his day with Bumpy Brown. Its spelling and grammar would later have made him wince but not in his best days could he have improved its humor.

CHAPTER IV

Foreground of the Mystery.

Shad spent a year and a half in the little village. It was enlivened by many visits to the Fun Shop in Brown's cove. The mysterious young lady had thrown a glamor of romance upon it. Once Bony had spoken playfully of their admiration and of their wish to see her again. Bumpy Brown looked serious and quickly changed the topic. He never spoke of her. The boys had jolly times with the tinker and his bird. He entertained them with quaint jests and thrilling tales and good food. His good-natured, merry talk, not like that of any other man, had made them fond of him. They were keen-minded boys. They suspected that his stories were not all true, that his alleged friend "Muggins" was a fiction. In spite of all this, they loved to be with Bumpy Brown.

Shad had now begun to find himself. He was growing in strength, stature and wisdom. He had learned how to study. He had acquired an almost sinful longing for good clothes. Still he liked not less good books and good company. His friend, the village doctor, had lent him the novels of Reade and Dickens and the poems of Longfellow and Tennyson. His best creditors were the doctor, the grammar and the dictionary. He had begun to enjoy his letter-writing. He had a sense of pride in the long letter that he had written to Mr. Converse.

Mr. Converse was so pleased with the letter that he sent a check of fifty dollars to the boy and bade him do as he pleased with the money. Shad went to Ashfield and bought fine raiment. That day he wrote a letter to Ruth Blake in which he said:

"At last I can come to visit you without being intimidated and oppressed by soiled garments. I hope that you will like my new clothes and me. We have gone into partnership and our business is to make a good impression on you. If we fail I shall not blame the clothes but I shall think that I am in very bad luck."

It must be said that the undertaking was successful. On three Sundays that autumn he and the new clothes were engaged in this romantic enterprise. The handsome lad and the girl went canoeing and rode about the countryside together. The boy succeeded in getting himself deeply in love. The last of these visits was on a Sunday late in October. The colonel was not at home. Shad ate a midday dinner with Ruth and her mother. The girl left them for a time to go out on an errand. This was a purely strategic move. The friendly gentleman and the boy talked together.

"Amity Dam is no place for you," said Mrs. Blake. "I'm going to try to help you out of that mire of rusticity. You must come to Canton and go to school. The colonel and I have been laying plans. I have no boy and I could be a kind of mother to you."

"I should like that. I would be very proud."

"You need a mother or a father to whom you could bring your troubles. You are so young."

"Well, my greatest trouble is the fact that I am so young."

"Do you call that a trouble? I wish that I were back at your age. I was in love at seventeen. It was the beginning of a great happiness."

Her Manner Was Haughty When She Said, "I Want to See Mr. Brown."

The boy was quick to take advantage of this opening. He was loosed for it. He blushed as he looked at her and said:

"I guess that I know how you felt. You loved to lie down at night and be alone with your happiness. In the morning the birds sang of the love in your heart. Even the flowers in the field knew your secret. They looked at you and nodded their heads as if they would give you encouragement. That is the way they treat me."

"You?"

"Yes, they are always reminding me of the colors in her hair and eyes and cheeks. I think that the sun and the moon and the stars shine only to show her face to me."

"My child! Are you in love?"

"Yes, but I am not a child."

"Whom do you love?"

"Your daughter."

Mrs. Blake took the boy's hand and laughed.

"In love! and getting one hundred and fifty dollars a year!" she exclaimed with good-natured amusement. "I suppose that you and your wife could get along on bread and water."

"I'm not always going to be poor."

"Your school days have scarcely begun."

"I learn fast. I shall get along."

"The time to fall in love is after you have got along, not before."

"It comes when it comes. Nobody can tell when he will fall in love."

"I wouldn't take this so seriously. You'll get over it."

"Never! You don't know how bad it is. I would rather die than give it up. I want to be engaged to Ruth."

"It is impossible. You are both far too young."

"But you were only seventeen when you fell in love."

"True, but those days things were different and I was not engaged for a year after that. The colonel was then three years older than I—old enough to be sure of himself. Now, Shad, I must ask you to promise me on your word of honor as a gentleman that you will say nothing to Ruth of this until I give you permission to do it. We'll see how you get along and we shall do everything that we can do to help you. If you keep your love for her and if she should be fond of you we will have another talk about it by and by."

"I will make the promise and keep it, but if I see that some other fellow is trying to get her it would be hard for me to keep myself from jumping in."

"Don't worry. You have the inside track. We are all fond of you. Let's see what happens."

Shad returned to his task in Amity Dam a bit depressed. Soon after that an unexpected trouble came upon him. One of the gold rings had been missing from its showcase for a week. Since the loss had been discovered Shad had observed a difference—slight but unmistakable—in the manner of Mr. and Mrs. Smithers. Indeed, he thought that other people had begun to treat him coolly.

The next Sunday afternoon Shad and Bony went down to Brown's cove. Shad told Bumpy of his trouble.

"Folks are just nat'rally cussed mean," said Bumpy. "They're made that way. By Jeedix! They can't help it no more'n a toad can help havin' warts. I heard t'other day in a house where I was tinkerin' that you an' Bony was wild. I says: 'Them boys are all right. Till they've learnt their lesson be easy on 'em. They'll come out as straight as a loon's leg.'"

Boys are quick to detect the note of insincerity. They knew that Bumpy spoke from his heart in spite of his own bitterness.

Suddenly he came to Shad. "Boy, I forgot yer trouble," he said. "Tell me about that ring. When did you see it last?"

"When I was showing it and some other trinkets to a girl the other day."

"What girl?"

"I don't know her name. She was about eighteen years old—light-colored hair an' blue eyes. She had pretty teeth an' a turned-up nose. There was a scar on her left cheek. Wore a blue dress."

"I'm afraid she's rather light-fingered," said Bumpy. "I know her, a few folks say in her neighborhood—a few miles south o' here. I'm a-goin' up there in a day or two. I'll see what I can do. Don't worry."

As they were leaving Bumpy said: "Come down next Sunday. I may have some news."

The next Sunday, to avoid criticism, they went to meeting and promptly set out for Brown's cove.

Bumpy was standing by the door. He waved his hat as they came up and called out:

"By Jeedix, boys! I'm happy! See that?"

He held up the gold ring between his thumb and forefinger. Shad trembled with excitement. "How did you get it?" he asked.

"Oh, I went an' see that gal an' I jus' scared it out o' her. Told her she'd have to give it back or go to jail. She broke down and handed it over. It was kind o' pitiful. I told her nobody would even know her name an' they won't—not from me. I'm a-goin' to take it to Smithers and tell him how I come by it."

The sat down to their dinner of roasted partridges and baked potatoes and pumpkin pie.

"There's just one fly in my ointment," said Bumpy as he began to carve the birds.

"What's that?" Bony asked.

"I've been drunk ag'in. Met an old comrade. We got to talkin' 'bout the second day at Gettysburg. There's suthin' cur'us 'bout Gettysburg. It's slippery ground. He had a bottle, we walked to Brown's cove in the cool o' the night an' got drunk on the way. We sot down here an' fit the Confeds till daylight. If I could fergit Gettysburg an' some other things, I'd be respectable."

They ate a moment in silence. Then Bumpy added:

"One drink will put the devil in me. The old sores begin to bleed. But I'm through—by Jeedix! Never no more whisky fer me. I'm through. The woman has looked purty solemn since then."

He carved the birds and loaded their plates. It was no time for idle words. Talk was not resumed until each had dulled his appetite on the bones. Then Bumpy began his tales of thrilling and improbable adventure.

When the boys thanked him and bade him good-by the sun was low. They left with a most friendly feeling for the old man.

Kukui Nut Has Added to Wealth of Hawaii

A profitable industry has developed in Hawaii, in the extraction of oil of the kukui-nut tree.

In days gone by, a business of respectable size was built up around this commodity, the output reaching about 10,000 gallons a month in 1850. The oil was then used for lighting homes, the nuts being burned after being strung together on a stick. It also was employed as a wood preservative. Modern chemists have seen its value in the manufacture of soft soap, oil varnishes, paints and linoleums.

The kukui trees grow wild on every island of the territory, huge groves of them flourishing in many mountain valleys. It is estimated that there are not less than 15,000 acres of the trees.

From this source not less than 75,000 tons of nuts might be gathered annually. Even should the yield be reduced to 50,000 tons, due to the inaccessibility of some of the trees, the commercial yield still would be in the neighborhood of 2,500,000 gallons of oil for twelve months.

Indian Edible

The wild flower Jack-in-the-pulpit is sometimes called "Indian turnip" because Indians used to cook the roots for food.

The United States get most of its asphalt, not from the famous asphalt lakes but by distillation of crude oil.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Secretary
Illinois Fire Association

Mary E. Humphrey, member, and Frank Z. Glick, secretary of the Illinois board of public welfare commissioners, and W. D. Clemmer, research sociologist of the Illinois department of public welfare, are engaged in investigations and organization work in "downstate" Illinois for Illinois emergency relief commission. Miss Humphrey has charge of investigations for the commission in the 35 counties in the central part of the state. Glick does this work in the northern 32 counties, and Clemmer covers the 34 southern counties.

Illinois' record-breaking institutional building program inaugurated by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson to provide adequate quarters for the hundreds of mental patients, may be the pattern upon which the state of California will add to its hospitals for mentally deficient wards. George B. McDougall, architect for the state of California, has been making a recent tour of inspection of institutions in Illinois and has been the guest of C. Herick Hammond, supervising architect for the state of Illinois, under whose direction Illinois' institutional building program was carried out.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, accompanied by Mrs. Emmerson, recently left Springfield for Mayo Brothers' hospital at Rochester, Minn., to undergo treatment for a foot injury that has been bothering him for several months. Although the injury is of minor nature, it has proved stubborn, having yielded very little to treatments he has received both in Springfield and in Chicago.

The Illinois American Legion's Veterans' service bureau became a part of the department of public welfare on June 1, Director Rodney H. Brandon has announced. That action was agreed upon, Director Brandon stated at a recent conference held by him with Legion officials. If at the end of the year the veterans' service bureau has operated efficiently as a branch of the state's public welfare department, it will be continued.

More than 95 per cent of all expenditures made for relief for the period ending May 12 by the Illinois emergency relief commission went for the care of families in their homes, according to Edward L. Ryerson, Jr., chairman of the commission.

Automobile accidents were responsible for an average of five deaths per day during the first quarter of 1932 in Illinois. The death toll for the quarter was 461, according to provisional statistics. These figures compare with an average of six deaths per day during the whole of 1931, and a total of 2,333 for the year. However, mortality from automobile accidents usually falls to the lowest levels of the year during the months between January and July.

The Illinois Commission for the Study of Poverty and Dependency in Old Age, which was appointed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, held its first public hearing in Peoria on June 2. It is planned to hold these hearings throughout the state in various cities and a complete report of the commission's findings will be made to the next session of legislature for consideration as to what measures of relief will be taken in Illinois.

Justice Oscar E. Heard of Freeport will be chief justice of the Illinois State Supreme court beginning with the June term which opens June 7. He succeeds Chief Justice Clyde E. Stone, of Peoria, who has presided throughout the past year. Under the rules of the state tribunal, a chief justice is named annually and the honor rotates among the chief justices.

A city council which complies with the provisions of the new law in selecting a depository for city funds is not liable if the funds are lost through insolvency of the bank, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has advised the state's attorney at Marshall.

The Illinois state civil service examinations scheduled for June 1 attracted 3,418 applicants, Harry S. Parker, president of the commission, has announced.

At the annual convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers held in Minneapolis recently, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy of Winnetka was re-elected first vice president and Mrs. L. Cass Brown of La Grange was re-elected as parliamentarian for a term of two years. The National Board of Managers will hold its annual meeting in Chicago next September, and the 1933 convention will be in Seattle next May.

When Glass Sticks

When two glass vessels get stuck together, so that there is danger of breaking them in getting them apart, put cold water in the inner one, and hold the outer one in warm water, and you will find that they will separate at once.

Beating Old Bill Gravity

Since we're going it on two instead of four legs, we need to build against gravity or lose. Certain exercises for health will keep the diaphragm domed and all below in place.

Several thousand party leaders from all parts of the state gathered at the state arsenal in Springfield on May 27 for the Republican state convention. Col. Frank L. Smith acted as temporary chairman. Besides adopting the platform and hearing speeches, the chief business of the convention was the selection of 22 delegates at large to the national convention, naming of presidential electors and nomination of three candidates for trustee of the University of Illinois.

Hearings to enable the Illinois commission on a future road program to map a plan of highway construction throughout the state for the next decade were held at Springfield on May 24, 25, 26. Created to map a plan for connecting the main highway arteries, this was the third hearing of the commission since appointment. The commission was authorized by the general assembly and will report its recommendations the next time that body convenes.

The future road commission will hold hearings on proposed Cook county highways in Springfield the latter part of June. At the June sessions, the commission also will hear from various women's and civic organizations seeking the beautification of state highways.

Governor Emmerson has disposed of the last group of bills passed by the general assembly at the special session by giving his approval to three measures, exempting the treasurer of sanitary districts, park boards and town collectors from liability for money lost in closed banks. They carry emergency clauses and become effective at once. The bills are similar to a group of others which were passed at the special session, exempting treasurers from liability.

Manufacture of automobile license tags at Illinois state penitentiary awaits word of the Secretary of State William J. Stratton that the state will use them. Secretary Stratton has received an answer to a query sent Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom advising him that he was not required by law to purchase the prison-made plates, since the motor vehicle law was not amended to make it mandatory.

The department of public works and buildings has announced approval of seven contracts for county road construction in Champaign, Tazewell and Lake counties. The projects total $217,783.54.

Lewis B. Springer, superintendent of the division of forestry, addressed the state meeting of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs held in Chicago on May 17. His subject was "Conservation and Forestry in Illinois." The address was enthusiastically received by more than 800 women who were present. The preservation and extension of present forests was urged, as well as beautification of the highways and the saving of native vegetation as a source of education and inspiration.

Contracts for $838,878.75 worth of state road work have been awarded by the state highway officials on the basis of bids received April 27, Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, has announced. The twenty-two separate sections call for 31.12 miles of paving, to cost $558,560.30; 22.18 miles of grading, which will cost $163,488.63, and $116,829.82 worth of bridge construction work.

Announcement has been made by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson that the state has completed the purchase of land for development into a 1,600-acre park in Jersey county, near Grafton. The purchase price, $44,985, was provided jointly by the state and local funds. A total of $23,085 was raised by popular subscription in Madison and Jersey counties and the balance was drawn from the allotment made by the state legislature for the acquisition of land for state parks and memorials. The site overlooks the valleys of the Illinois, Mississippi and the Missouri rivers.

Representatives of state departments and state organizations met recently in Springfield with members of the state-wide extension committee of the Illinois library association to formulate plans for the extension of library service in the state. A concentrated publicity program was decided upon with practical demonstration to take place later of the benefits accruing from rural library service.

The number of men directly employed in state and county road construction work has increased to 5,403, according to reports turned in by the district engineers for the week ending May 11, and tabulated in the office of Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer.

JACOB THE AGED FATHER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 46:1-7, 28-30; 47:7.

GOLDEN TEXT—Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Joseph Honors His Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph's Father Blesses the King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May We Honor Our Parents? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Obligations to Our Parents.

I. Jacob Journeys to Egypt (45:16-46:27).

1. Joseph sends for his father (45:16-24). At Pharaoh's request Joseph sent an urgent invitation to Jacob to come to Egypt, promising to give him the "good of the land."

2. Jacob consents to go (45:25-28). The news that Joseph was alive and "lord of all Egypt," backed up with the sight of the "wagons which Joseph had sent to carry him," induced Jacob to consent to go.

3. Jacob's vision at Beer-sheba (46:1-7).

4. He offered sacrifices unto God (v. 1). As he was now about to leave Canaan, Jacob sought God's guidance and blessing. His soul, no doubt, was moved with great emotion.

5. God's response to Jacob (vv. 2-4). He bade him go to Egypt without fear, assuring him of the divine presence and blessing and his ultimate return to Canaan.

6. Arrival in Egypt (vv. 5-7). Jacob was accompanied by his sons, their wives, their children and cattle. With the meeting of Joseph the family circle was now complete, seventy souls in all (v. 27).

II. Jacob Meets Joseph (46:28-34).

Though the journey was now over, they were faced with perplexing problems. God had promised to be with Jacob, and Pharaoh had promised to Joseph that they should "eat of the fat of the land," but the details were not known.

1. Judah sent before (v. 28). He was sent perhaps to direct them to the Land of Goshen.

2. Met by Joseph (vv. 29, 30). Joseph, being the lord of Egypt, properly traveled in his royal chariot. Though he was Jacob's son, it was proper that he should extend a royal welcome.

III. Joseph Presents His Father and Brethren unto Pharaoh (47:1-6).

1. Pharaoh's invitation (45:16-19). Jacob and his sons were in Egypt by the king's invitation. Joseph, though occupying an exalted position, was not ashamed of his father.

2. Joseph's tact (47:1, 2 cf. 46:30-34).

a. In introducing his father and brethren in a personal way, thus capitalizing his own influence in favor of his kin.

b. In having his father and brethren come to Goshen (45:10). Since possession is "nine points of the law" they were already in Goshen before asking Pharaoh for permission to occupy it (v. 4).

c. In coaching his brethren (46:34). He taught them beforehand what to say because he knew how awkward they would be before the great king.

d. In choosing five, not all (v. 2). In all probability he chose the five who would make the best appearance.

3. Their request to Pharaoh (vv. 3, 4). Joseph anticipated Pharaoh's questions and put the proper words into their mouths to be used in making their desires known.

4. Pharaoh's response (vv. 5, 6). a. His gracious offer. They were to enjoy the best of the land.

b. Positions of trust offered to capable men among them. He knew how capable Joseph was and surmised that some of his brethren might be likewise gifted.

IV. Jacob Blessing Pharaoh (47:7-10).

Here is an appraisal of true dignity. Though Pharaoh was the great king and Jacob now a suppliant at his feet, receiving natural blessings, yet morally Jacob was above Pharaoh and therefore conferred blessings upon him.

V. Joseph Nourishes His Father and Brethren (47:11, 12).

1. He placed them in the best of the land according as Pharaoh had commanded (v. 11). They were thus ready to go forward in business as soon as the famine was ended.

2. He nourished them (v. 12). Since there was no bread in all the land to be obtained except as dispensed by Joseph, he distributed to them according to their needs. Our Joseph, Jesus Christ, supplies all our needs according to his riches in glory (Phil. 4:10).

DR. V. G. GUSTAFSON

"OPTOMETRIST" AT W. A. GUSTAFSON, 667 CASS ST.,
JOLIET: Phone 2-9046

There is no question but that the eyes are the most important sense organs possessed by man. It is a fact known to all scientists that impressions are received twenty times as fast through the eye as through the ear, the next most sensitive organ. These facts make it a matter of extreme importance that the eyes be kept in perfect condition, that everything possible be done to relieve the awful strain under which they are placed in this modern world of efficiency where the most is demanded of every faculty that man possesses.

Some of us inherit eyes subject to certain defects. Others of us have not taken care of our eyes when we were children. Any inherent weakness or any mistreatment of the eyes may cause us to need glasses. Because of the delicateness of the eyes no one but an expert should be allowed to examine and correct our vision. A mistake may mean a handicap for life in the way of extremely defective eyesight. If the eyes have a slight weakness they can usually be remedied if they are given attention soon enough.

It should be a source of great satisfaction to the people of the community that they have conveniently located in their midst a man whose fine technical skill and long experience makes him an expert in examining for and fitting of glasses.

Dr. V. G. Gustafson, Optometrist, at W. A. Gustafson, 667 Cass, Joliet has made a special study of the eye and is thoroughly competent in every respect. He uses only the finest makes of lenses and will fit them for you in the latest style as low as $3.50 and we are glad to recommend his services to our readers.

Corn Belt Hatcheries

"BABY CHIX EVERY TUESDAY AND FRIDAY THROUGHOUT SUMMER"

Located at 404 Ruby St., in Joliet, is a very large, modern hatchery and produce thousands of chicks, having been one of the essential factors in promoting the more extensive raising of poultry in the state, truly a most valued institution.

THE CORN BELT HATCHERIES "in the heart of chickenland", is considered an authority upon these matters. Under personal and careful direction, raise thousands of chicks each year.

In addition to this, they do custom hatching of any stock and have a large patronage in this department.

People who are interested in poultry raising should visit this hatchery if they have not already done so. They make a specialty of day old chicks and can actually save you money if you are in the market for chicks.

Their baby chicks are sturdy and full of pep and those who have purchased baby chicks here invariably re-order from this firm when they are in the market again.

Now is the time to order your chicks. It will pay you, all poultry and market experts say that this year is the time to raise your normal number of chickens which promises you better returns in the poultry business. Even today at the low prices poultry pays a profit. And business cycles, after a study of specific and general economics proves that a scarcity usually follows years of over production. The poultry business should pay a higher profit next year. They are always willing to give any information desired and give prompt attention to letters, personal calls or telephone inquiries and orders.

It affords us pleasure to recommend this hatchery to our readers and when they give them a trial they will be convinced that chicks from CORN BELT HATCHERIES will be of the highest value. Their past reputation is your guarantee for the future.

Big Robey Classic Will Be Run Sunday

Twenty-one of the forty starters in the famous 500-mile Indianapolis Speedway Race last Memorial Day have entered the 100-mile National A. A. Point Championship Race to be run at Roby Chicago Speedway on Sunday afternoon, June 19.

The names of two winners of the famous International Classic are among the long list of entrants. Freddy Frame, winner of the $32,500 prize at Indianapolis this year and Lou Schneider, the 1931 champion, are both to be starters in the century grind over the local speedway.

The other stars entered so far are "Howdy" Wilcox second place winner at Indianapolis, Bob Carey winner of fourth, Wilbur Shaw who led the classic for sixty-five miles, Russell Snowberger who placed fifth, Stubby Stubblefield sixth money winner, Ira Hall who placed 7th, Ernie Tripplett who led the pack for 92 miles, Wild Bill Cummings who was 5th in championship standing last year, Chet and Al Miller who are entered as the Hudson Factory Team, and Sam Ross, Joe Russo, Deacon Litz, Gene Hausten, Al Aspen, Geo. Howie, "Doc" McKenzie, Al Gordon and Malcolm Fox.

If Freddy Frame can win the Roby Chicago race, he will have clinched the 1932 speed championship of America. However, "Howdy" Wilcox is but 90 points behind Frame in championship standing and should he win at the local speedway, the two leaders will have to battle it out over the Syracuse, New York speedway later in the year.

Preparations are being made to handle the largest crowd that has ever attended any speed classic in this part of the country, and it is expected that practically all of the notables of the dangerous sport will attend the championship event. Gar Wood, the International Motor Boat Champion, is to be the starter of the event. The famous Barney Oldfield will be the pace maker. T. E. "Pop" Meyers, manager of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will be the referee, and Al Fash, manager of the Chicago Auto Trades Association will be the Three A representative in charge of the meet.

S. S. KRESGE CO.

5c to $1.00 Store

The success of the S. S. Kresge Co. dollar store at 201 North Chicago street in Joliet is due to two elements in modernization and conduct of these modern stores—the fact that it is conducted along the most modern lines of organization and collective buying and, too, the service in the establishment is of the highest order.

The idea of collective buying with other stores of like character from one large central buying establishment where buying is done on a large scale is a creation of the hour and the fact that it has met with success proves that it has taken its place in later day merchandising. This gives the advantage of a buyer who understands style, materials and prices as he makes them a continual study and comes in contact with world trade. Thus the stock of this store is not purchased by a casual buyer who goes to the trading and market centers occasionally while making purchases. This businesslike method gives this store the advantage of offering the goods at prices that cut out the middleman and are a great saving to the people. Quality and style are not only better, but are higher as the buyer sees that all stock comes to a standard. The buyer is an excellent judge of stock by his continual contact with everything in the line.

The appointments at this store are the very latest, all the display arrangements being of the latest type. Special attention is paid to seeing that the stock is kept in perfect order and good condition.

In making this review of our progress we cannot fail to compliment the S. S. Kresge Co., dollar store in Joliet as an institution that is an elemental factor in home, economic and business life of the people of the community.

Sport Notes

Tinley Splits Double Header

After dropping the first game of a double header, to the Mokena Juniors 6 to 4, with Devlin the losing pitcher and Lauffer the winner, the Tinley Park Juniors came back strong to win the second and most interesting game 8 to 9 from the Foster A. C. of Chicago.

With the score tied in the ninth inning and Guindon the pitcher on third base with two out, Gotham tripped to deep center to win the game for the Tinley boys.

The Tinley Juniors boast a record of 5 wins against 2 defeats, and are still waiting to hear from the Tinley big team for that challenged game. Many fans would like to see these two teams play on the 3rd or 4th of July. It is expected that the whole town would turn out to see these kid sensations give the big team a real ball game.

Next Sunday, July 19th the little fellows will travel to Chicago Ridge 107th and Ridgeland ave., to give battle to the strong Ridge team.

Now that the boys have played and licked teams their size, they are going in for keener competition and they are expected to hold their own.

Every ardent ball fan and true sport in Tinley should get behind these kids, and they will be treated with one glorious afternoon of fun and thrills as the little fellows dig in the dirt for the ground balls and make thrilling catches on the field.

The pitching staff is quite the thing with Guindon, Gotham, and Devlin to twirl and little Paul Haney showing the batters what the ball looks like after it lands in his catcher's glove.

Sunday June 26th Orland American Legion team will come to Tinley Park to face the Tinley Juniors. Every body is cordially invited, "Let's Go." Owing to lack of space we are unable to run the box score.

Monee Defeats Mokena

Mokena was defeated by Monee last Sunday after a hard fought game. The score was Mokena 7 runs, 8 hits, 1 error. Monee, 9 runs, 7 hits, 1 error. Gilmore's home run was the feature of the game. Losing pitcher, Oswald. Winning pitcher, Rebrose.

HOUSES of the FUTURE will have SMALLER KITCHENS and LARGER BATHROOMS

Modern bathrooms are attractive, well lighted, ventilated and frequently equipped with health exercisers and weighing machines

Dishwashing is one of the daily monotonous tasks

Coffee and toast in today's breakfast nook without effort

The vacuum cleaner abolishes the tiresome and dirty task of sweeping

Automatic Refrigeration helps every housewife to achieve economies

ARCHITECTURAL exhibitions this winter emphasize an overwhelming trend toward smaller kitchens and larger bathrooms. There is no particular connection between these opposite tendencies, except that both have a sound scientific basis and are interesting illustrations of American leadership in everything that makes for efficiency and good living.

Small kitchens are in general more convenient than large ones. Fifty years ago the average American kitchen was often the largest room in the house, an expanse of vast open space frequently used as a general sitting room, as a laundry, and as a playroom for the children. Distances from one point to another were so great that food preparation became a task requiring the combined efforts of several persons. An inquisitive husband who strapped a pedometer to his wife's wrist found that she walked more than a quarter of a mile while making a custard pie in such an old-fashioned kitchen.

The modern kitchen is designed for the utmost conservation of time and energy, and the ideal size for the average home, according to scientists, is an oblong room no more than 8 by 12 feet. The oblong shape is better than the square because fewer steps are required in crossing the room from one work center to another.

Science also dictates the arrangement of the equipment. Everything is arranged for purposes of step saving. Most women work in a right to left motion. The order of their kitchen is fixed,—first, gathering up the raw food from cupboard and refrigerator; second, preparing it for the stove; third, cooking it and serving it; fourth, removing the dishes, washing them and putting them away. This fixed order is reflected in the arrangement of the kitchen furniture,—first, refrigerator and food cupboard; second, work table; third, stove; fourth, serving table; fifth, sink and dish cupboard.

The scientists prescribe that the walls shall be lined with all the equipment in the order named, so that work proceeds exactly like the assembling of an automobile on an endless belt. And the kitchen of the future will be as small as it can conveniently be and meet these requirements.

Bigger and Better Bathrooms

On the other hand, bathrooms just naturally tend to increase in size and importance. The modern bathroom has come to be one of the most attractive rooms in the house, well lighted, well ventilated and luxuriously equipped and decorated.

The American bathroom has no precedent in the lives and customs of people of other lands. There are no "period styles" in bathrooms to copy. The bathroom is a development of the past 35 years, and architects have only recently begun seriously to study the equipment and decorative treatment of this modern American room.

Originality in bathroom architecture was held back for a long time by the casual and undistinguished beginnings of the room itself. A generation ago, when a home owner became converted to its importance as a factor in health and comfort, he would order one installed in his house, usually converting another room, a large closet or a back hallway into a bathroom. And this attitude toward the bathroom has left its mark upon architects and builders up to very recent years. In planning new houses, or remodeling old ones, they gave the least possible consideration to the bathroom. It was tucked away in any old corner, and grudgingly given a small obscure window.

Times are changing, however, and today architects and builders have begun to realize that the bathroom is so essential to the well-being of the whole family that from the very starting of the plans for a house it should be a part of that home and should receive special attention.

In the houses of the future this particular room will be planned and built as a bathroom, with more light, more air and more sunshine than ever before. It will have plenty of space, and will be frequently equipped with such machinery of health as exercisers, weighing machines and sun lamps.

Magic of Machinery

Science and invention have worked so many miracles in the daily life of the Twentieth Century that people sometimes fail to realize their supreme contribution to the noble task of abolishing household drudgery. In an hour, the modern home maker can accomplish things that required days and weeks in the days of her mother and grandmother.

First came the electric iron, and the steps it saved from the stove to the ironing board and back again amounted to several miles a year for every home maker. Next came the washing machine, not only saving time but also contributing to human happiness by abolishing aching backs and cracked knuckles. Then the vacuum cleaner, which at one stroke abolished the tiresome and dusty task of sweeping. Finally the automatic refrigerator, whose possibilities are only just beginning to be realized by home makers,—for it not only saves time and energy, but actually takes a part in the preparation of food, adding a long list of intriguing contributions to the daily menu.

The automatic refrigerator has brought a new touch of luxury and attractiveness to the home table. It has added a note of color and zest to all departments of domestic hospitality. With its aid, the technique of food preparation approaches perfection.

We have discovered that cold is just as important in the kitchen as heat. It improves many fruits and vegetables. It makes meats more healthful and appetizing. It enables the home maker to keep her prepared dishes longer and to do her work further in advance. It brings to the ordinary family hundreds of recipes never before within their command. It helps every housewife to the achievement of new successes and new economies.

The importance of a good refrigerator is unquestionable. Annual yearly waste of foodstuffs in the United States is 20 percent of the total, and half of this is waste in the home due to spoilage.

Frozen Desserts

The first Englishman to taste a frozen sherbet was Richard the Lion Hearted. In the year 1191, while he was crusading in Palestine, he was treated to this delicacy by the Mohammedan leader Saladin. Richard could hardly believe his tongue when he tasted so delicate a dish.

One of the "tall tales" told by Marco Polo when he came back from his travels was about a frozen pudding that tasted like sweetened snow. Nobody believed him until he showed a Vienna cook how to do it. About 300 years later one of his recipes was used by Catherine de Medici as the climax of her wedding feast. Today with the aid of the automatic refrigerator the humblest home may have with slight effort and expense dishes which 200 years ago were served only to kings and emperors, and to them only on the most important occasions. Today it is no more trouble to make a biscuit tortoni than a rice pudding.

Housecleaning Made Easy

The bugbear of housecleaning has been practically driven out of American life by the modern spirit of efficiency and labor saving. New tools and machines have been developed, old implements and materials have been improved, and houses are built so that it is easy to keep them clean. The modern washing machine, the vacuum cleaner, the self-wringing mops and chemicalized dust cloths are instruments which make it a practical working principle to keep clean rather than to make clean.

If the daily household routine is carefully planned, if the kind of furnishings that are easy to keep clean are chosen and handled in the right way, and if provision is made for keeping all the dirt possible out of the house, there is no longer any need for worrying about those periodic upheavals which used to be known as "housecleaning time." The modern woman is a great believer in "preventive house cleaning," which means a study of where dirt comes from, and an effort to stop it before it enters.

Another household invention which is just beginning to find a wide following among architects and home makers is the electric dishwasher. In a questionnaire mailed to 1000 housewives asking their opinion as to the most disagreeable and monotonous task in housework, 920 mentioned "dishwashing." It is a task, of course, that must be faced three times a day, seven times a week, 1095 times a year. No other task in housework consumes the time required by this one operation.

Somebody has estimated that an electric dishwasher actually saves the average woman 40 working days of eight hours each out of every year. A scientist has figured that old-fashioned methods of dishwashing cost $282 a year for a family of four people: when done electrically the cost is $141.

Importance of Soft Water

Among household inventions which have not yet gained universal recognition, architects are now emphasizing the value of water softeners. Water is so essential in every phase of modern life, and it bears such an important relation to health and personal comfort, that everyone should know more about those characteristics of water that make it desirable or detrimental for household and personal use.

Water is the greatest solvent known to man. That is, it will dissolve readily a greater number of substances than any other liquid, and for that reason always contains many impurities. As water falls from the sky in the form of rain, it gathers up all the particles of dust, smoke and gases that have risen from the ground and are floating about in the air. Water from springs, wells or rivers gathers up mineral impurities.

Probably the time will come when all water used in homes will be filtered through a water softener, to remove the impurities that harden the water and hamper the lathering qualities of soap.

In the laundry, soft water imparts a snowy dry fluffiness and a sweet smelling cleanliness to the wash that is absolutely unknown to hard-water users.

Those Good Old Days

It is the feeble and ill-nourished mind that shrinks from knowledge of what has been and suffers from pessimistic dread of what is yet to be. Camper of Experience

Talks About the "Eats"

Camp cooking is a highly artistic talent that can only be developed through practice and experience, says a writer in Field and Stream. This sage camper lists several rules to follow in preparing the meal excellent in camp.

"Let one man do it. Don't take turns. Don't hold conferences. Let one man do it, and if he doesn't do it right, hang him, quarter him, toss him in the lake—but don't give him any advice. An amateur cook is more temperamental than an opera singer of long press-agent experience. Meddling simply confuses him and cramps whatever style he may have.

"Let the camper follow some rules: Never bake biscuits if you can carry bread. Camp biscuits are not nearly so good as ordinary bread. They merely sound better.

"Carry fresh potatoes. The same goes for onions. Desiccated carrots and corn and all sorts of soup stocks are as good as the fresh kind. I believe they are better.

"Don't believe that a square of chocolate is worth a pound of steak. Or that a malted-milk tablet is worth a peck of potatoes. Don't rely on calories to keep you alive and happy. Food supplies based on calories may keep you alive. They'll not keep you happy. You aren't taking your vacation merely to be kept alive. On the second day out you can sell a big, juicy corned-beef sandwich to the 'condensed food' man for $50 plus his shirt and boots."

Scotland Gets High Cliffs

A. Campbell Blair has bequeathed to Scotland the southern portion of the headland of Ardmearoch, known as the Burg. The Burg cliffs, exposed to the Atlantic, rise 1,200 feet from the sea, and provide sanctuary for many sea birds. The cliffs contain many caves, including the Mackinnon cave, once visited by Doctor Johnson. On the Burg is also to be seen the famous MacCulloch tree, one of the most ancient fossil trees in existence.

In Memoriam

In sweet remembrance of our dear little son and brother, Robert Nicholas Marti who left us so suddenly on June 20, 1931, at the age of eight and one half years.

This lovely bud, so young, so fair Called hence by early doom, Just came to show how sweet a flower.

In Paradise would bloom. Ere sin could harm or sorrow fade, Death came with friendly care, This opening bud to Heaven conveyed.

And bade it bloom there. Then some sweet day we'll meet again,

Beyond the toil and strife, And clasp each other's hand once more, In Heaven, that happy life.

HEART BROKEN
PARENTS AND SISTERS

On June 23rd a hearing will be held on the south end of the Wolf road at Springfield before the Future Roads Commission which will on that date hear arguments for all the roads Will County is seeking on the secondary road program to be recommended by the commission to the legislature next January. This will mean that the south end of Wolf road which is not on the county bond issue, will be built by the state from the gas tax. The south stretch is a little over two miles in length and will connect two state bond issue roads, namely Lincoln highway and route 51 and will be a straight road to Kannakee.

Cook County had planned to carry on the paving of the Wolf road to the north, but owing to the dire unemployment situation in that county the gas tax money which had been intended for road building had been used for relief work instead. Commissioner George Miller advises. He further gives the assurance, however, that Wolf road is on Cook County's road program and will be paved soon as funds are available. When finally completed Wolf road will be a very important outer belt line for Chicago and will also connect up with Milwaukee, Wisconsin on the north and connect with other highways as far south as Kentucky.

A church exists to assist man in his eternal quest for truth, goodness, beauty, salvation and the kingdom of God. St. John's is conscious of her high purpose. You are invited to worship with us.
The combined Aid Meeting and reunion held in the M. E. church was well attended. Refreshments were served to about 60 guests and members.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Bruder who gave a welcome to the visitors. Mrs. Mary Jackson gave a Scripture reading after which all joined in the Lord's Prayer. Roll, which included old and new members was called by the secretary, Mrs. R. Hensel, acting chairman of the program had a fine program arranged. It was opened by a song by all, "Blest Be The Tie That Binds", accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Rose Moriarty. Musical selections by Eloise Balaz, Dorothy Hall and Dorothy Kraus. Songs by Velma Klose and Madeline Wachter. Readings by Mrs. Byron Nelson, Mrs. Mary Jackson and Bernice Hostert. Out of town speakers were Mrs. Fred Warning of Frankfort, gave a very interesting talk on the first organization of the Aid in 1904, twenty-eight years ago. Mrs. M. Brinkerhoff of Lockport, amusingly described humorous incidents in the past Aid work. Mrs. Lockwood of New Lenox, talked on the value of the Aid to the Church and the Community. The meeting closed by singing, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" in unison. Mrs. Fred Werner played the accompaniment of this song. Mrs. Florence Neithammer of St. Louis, took several pictures of the group. Altogether it was a most pleasant afternoon and it was the opinion of all present that there should be another reunion before another twenty-eight years.

The church was very beautifully decorated for the occasion with many lovely bouquets of flowers, the out-standing one being a huge basket of flowers given by Mrs. Warning in memory of her mother, Mrs. Kinarty, now deceased, who was the first president.
